THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC VICTORY.

As predicted by THE STATESMAN house to elect that Cleveland and Stevenson have carried the country by the largest popular vote ever given to the electors of earrying with it assurances that every control of the Democrats for the next four years.

The issue was made by Mr. Cleve land four years ago when he sacrificed the presidency by the proposition to make tariff reform the main the Democratic plank of platform, and the main issue to be presented by the Democratic party. Mr. Cleveland was in advance of his party and he knew it, but he also knew that the reduction of the tariff to a revenue basis was the mission of the Democratic party, and unless that could be effected he did not believe a victory for the party at that time was worth an emergency policy. In other words, he considered that of vital importance to the interest and prosperity of the country, and he chose rather to be right and to inaugurate a canvass of education than to be president.

The country at the time was not prepared for these advanced views young industries on their first legs.

If danger is ahead it does enormity of that measure and it is astonishing that they ever expected to but when the danger is encountered win on that bill as an issue.

It is a great victory, it is a victory of the people over the best organized party that ever existed in this country backed by machinery in the hands of more than one hundred thousand office holders. It is a victory of the people over class legislation of the most obnoxious form, the taxation of the masses for the benefit of a few manufactures.

The Democratic party goes into power on the 4th of March, next, with heavy responsibilities resting on the shoulders of the representatives. The question of the tariff has to be treated with great care and wisdom so that the country shall not feel the shock of financial disaster in to sudden a whench of the machinery of the country. The objectionable and oppressive features of the tariff must be eliminated but it must be done so that a gradual policy of a tariff for been alleged that his platform revenue may be inagurated upon the body politic of the country, so that the prosperity enjoyed by the tew may be disseminated among the masses.

The wall built around our avnues of trade must be gradually demolished the ports of the world must be opened up to our commerce and the laws must be amended so that American bottoms will do the carrying trade of the country and the country will grow in individual prosperity, in material grandure and in political rank among the nations of the earth.

THE STATESMAN is not inistic. It looks on the right side or every not hesitate to warn the people of it, it would be recreant to duty if it failed to move up to the breach and stand ready to defend it. It makes no difference whose shoulder it touches if he is a good soldier faithful to his

It would be inconsistent with its past policy for the last six months fay Texas is not in danger, but it would be cowardly for those who recognize that danger to sulk in their tents.

It has never been intimated in al this exciting canvass by this paper that the adherents of Governor Hogg were not patriots just as eager and anxious for the welfare of Texas as his opponents. It has differed with Governor Hogg solely as to the means to be employed to secure that welfare; nor has it been charged that Governor Hogg and his supporters were not Democrats. It has was not Democratic, and that his policy was subversive to the best interests of Texas.

So thoroughly was it convinced of these facts that it chose rather to risk a split in the Democratic party in a presidential year, not fearing, however, that the national Democratic party would be hurt by that split, for Texas Democracy is too ingrained by bitter experience in the very nature of a Texan to allow a state issue to divert him from the importance of the election of a Democratic president, especially when the nominee was Grover Cleveland.

Nor has THE STATESMAN ever present time there have been only Texas of Governor Hogg, but it has tor the position to which he has been re-elected.

THE RIGHT OF DOMICILE ABROAD.

There is not a subject in the wide domain of thought free from the grasp of some set of cranks who are ready at all times to organize a society or congress for the purpose of considering it and legislating upon it, although they have not a vestige of authority to do so.

The Institute of International Rights have recently held a congress at Geneva to consider the right of governments to expel foreigners from their borders-and they have formulated certain rules or quasi laws that they propose to put in force throughout civilization.

The expulsion on short notice of the Jews from Russia was a very great hardship upon the Jews who were compelled to leave the country at short notice and necessarily sacrifice all their immovable possessions. The Jews are about the only people that such an international congress could be of any benefit to if they had any other authority than that of public opinion to enforce these laws, for they are the only people on the face of the earth who have no national home or government which could compel Russia to observe their right of domicile, unless they have become citizens of the United

Vattel, the highest recognized authority on international law, more than a hundred years ago laid down very clearly the privileges obtained by the right of domicile in his "Droit des Gens." In addition to the rights incident to domicile he says "it is manifestly unjust to first proclaim the right of domicile and then expel those who avail themselves of it, catching them in a trap, as it were."

That fact is obvious, but these Jews in Russia are the only people who cannot enforce international rights of domicile with an army and navy, or rather force Russia to compensate them for their losses on account of the sudden notice to leave without taking time to consider of the manner of leaving. The same author adds that twenty-four hours must be given to the "exeant" foreigner. While that is manifestly only applicable to foreigners temporarily residing in a country and inadequate to those who have acquired real estate, the question arises, who is to enforce any law in behalf of these nationless Jews?

This Geneva internationist congress of cranks go farther and desire to impose on all nations regulations prohibiting the expulsion of foreigners.

We, down here in the South, may have abated slightly in our idea of state rights, but we would certainly protest against any power infringing menaced by two great and growing on our national sovereignty in regulating this thing at our own sweet will. We are very generous in our thought we were too lenient, and this congress of international cranks ought to understand that while as a government we would protect the right of domicile of our citizens abroad we never should presume to infringe upon the abstract right of other nations in their sovereign control of this question nor permit other nations to dictate to us on that sub-

> The board of bishops of his own church at their quadrennial conference in May last at Omaha, made the following deliverance as their rule of conduct:

"With regard to politics, the attitude of our chnrch is strenuously nonpartisian and non-sectional. It ackits members who have the right to from ecclesiastical interference to determine for himself for whom his bal. only as individuals, various leaders lot shall be cast. The right of suffrage, or the franchise, we regard as a great and responsible trust, which should in all cases, ecclesiastical and civil, be exercised conscientiously, but in absolute personal freedom.

The bishop must be aware that some of the most profound statesmen, some of the purests men, some of the total abstainers from all intoxicants, regard this prohibition as a stab at the rights of every man in this country, not merely to vote as he pleases but to do as he pleases in matters that do not interfere with any human being in any rights social, religious or political that have been so amply and fully secured to him by the laws of the coun

If he knows this fact what is he doing? These men referred to would say stepping down out of his pulpit and attacking the personal rights of men, advocating old and abandoned sumptuary laws to prescribe to a man what he shall eat and drink and may hap what he shall wear.

Does he recognize that in stepping out of his pulpit he is not only befouling his white clerical garments in the clums of elections but that he is permitting his religious zeal to lead him on to an attack on the fundamental principles of a Republican government?

It will be interesting to the reader to know that while the bishop at first seemed to limit the duties of ministers of the gospel to this single matter of "prohibition," his political zeal has worked him up into a white heat and before he concludes his article he branches out into the broadest claim for his cloth. He says:

"Republican institutions on this continent are now confronted and evils, both requiring the presence of the pulpit in the political arena; the an interview he attributes the sweepenormous and unblushing corruption ing Democratic victory to the tariff of many of our municipal govern- for revenue only agitation of the Demlaws on this subject.
